The Lord is my light and my salvation.

Reflections From Fr. Robert Carlton: Saint Patrick

With the upcoming Feast Day of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland and the “Apostle of Ireland” who lived from approximately 385 through 461, it is worth reflecting upon the life of the actual St. Patrick. One of the main lessons of his life was reflected in the story of Joseph in the Book of Genesis, who said to his brothers (after Joseph became aware of what they were trying to do to him): “Don’t be afraid. Am I in the place of God? You intended to harm me, but God intended it for good to accomplish what is now being done, the saving of many lives. So then, don’t be afraid. I will provide for you and your children.”

Patrick was born in a Britain that was controlled by the Romans and his father would have been a local official in the Roman government. In his Confession, Patrick makes it clear, though, that he was not a believer in any kind of religion in his early years. However, at the age of sixteen, according to Patrick’s memoir, he was kidnapped by a group of Irish pirates and was taken to Ireland and held captive there for six years. During this time, rather than be driven further away from a life of faith, Patrick chose to embrace the Christian way of proceeding: “And there [in Ireland] the Lord opened the sense of my unbelief that I might at least remember my sins and be converted with all my heart to the Lord my God, who had regard for my abjection, and mercy of my youth and ignorance, and watched over me before I knew Him, and before I was able to distinguish between good and evil, and guarded me, and comforted me as would a father his son.”

After six years like this, Patrick heard a voice saying that it was time for him to go home and, responding to this, he fled from where he was and made his way to a port that was approximately two hundred miles away from where he had been and, within a couple of days, landed in Britain. Patrick eventually returned home to his family and continued his study of Christianity.

Some time after this, Patrick experienced another vision, which he recounted in his Confession: “I saw a man coming, as it were from Ireland. His name was Victorinus, and he carried many letters, and he gave me one of them. I read the heading: ‘The Voice of the Irish.’ As I began the letter, I imagined in that moment that I heard the voice of those very people who were near the wood of Foclut, which is beside the western sea - and they cried out, as with one voice: ‘We appeal to you, holy servant boy, to come and walk among us.’” Patrick then returned to Ireland, where he found enormous success in his missionary work, aided largely by his knowledge and experience of Irish language and culture, which he had gained during his years as a slave there earlier in his life. According to tradition, Patrick died on March 17, 461, after twenty-five to thirty years of missionary work, during which time he was largely responsible for Ireland becoming one of the most Catholic countries in Europe.

Patrick’s life is not only an example of commitment to the faith and to God’s call, but also to how God can turn what appears to be times of great suffering towards the good in the long run, much as he did with Joseph in the Book of Genesis. How, then, in your life has God used instances of difficulty to lead you towards something good later?

Gospel Meditation - Encourage a Deeper Understanding of Scripture

There is so much wisdom in the first commandment. The daily demands of life, current political ideologies and dynamics, social expectations, corporate philosophies, and even technology can easily become lesser gods. We can find ourselves beholden to and held captive by these secular constructs and systems. Even for those who profess a faith in the one true God, these lesser, attractive but false gods are a temptation. Being overly preoccupied and even obsessed with the state of our present lives, we lose sight of our real destiny and purpose.

Jesus showed his disciples a glimpse of this destiny when he was transfigured before their eyes. In fact, Peter was so caught up in the brilliance, awe, and sacredness of these fleeting moments that he wanted to extend them as long as possible. Wonderful things happen when we leave our illusions and discover something that is true. This is why creating some sacred space in our lives for reflection, prayer, renewal, refreshment, centering ourselves, and disconnecting from the noise is so important. It shows us how false and shallow our lives can be and what is really of importance. Do you create some kind of sacred space in your life? Lent is a perfect time to do so.

St. Irenaeus, one of the early fathers and martyrs of the Catholic Church, said that, "he who was the Son of God became the Son of Man that man ... might become the son of God." We mistakenly believe that life is all about us. It's not. Ours is a journey of transformation in which we become more and more one with the mind of Christ and Christ himself. St. Augustine saw this same transformation occurring when the Eucharist is received. In receiving the Eucharist, we become what we eat, the Body of Christ. Honestly acknowledging false gods that we cling to can open the door for God to show us the wholeness and holiness to which we are called. Take time to discover the sacred. When we do, we will want to stay there for a while. Then, when we return to our personal affairs, we will see more clearly. ©LPi

Special Collection: Aid For The Church In Central and Eastern Europe

Pope Francis has called upon the Universal Church to pray for peace in Ukraine. Catholics in the US can also show their solidarity by participating in the annual Collection for the Church in Central & Eastern Europe. The collection will help the Church in Ukraine bring the light of Christ to the faithful affected by the darkness of war, violence, and loss of families and homes and provide other essential funding in the region. Your support of this collection is a tangible way of assisting the Church's response and outreach to those affected and displaced by the violence. Your contributions will continue to provide emergency funds that are already helping the victims of this war with food and water, hygiene supplies, support, and other necessary humanitarian services. Your support is crucial to help those affected by this unfolding humanitarian disaster. Envelopes are available in the Vestibule of our Church. Please be generous (if you are able.)
